White Man, Give Me Money! Simon Canning

My honest story of the reality of doing humanitarian work alone in the corrupt and poverty stricken Democratic Republic of Congo in the heart of Africa. Where life-threatening days were common place and being the only white man for hundreds of miles made me a target for every beggar and corrupt official that laid eyes on me. Murders, corruption, kidnappings, carjacking's and life and death tests of my flying skills combined this with the collapse of my support structure, I was about to discover the realities of trying to do front line charity work in the D.R.C.
