African Hunting, from Natal to the Zambesi: Including Lake Ngami, the Kalahari Desert, &c. From 1852 to 1860 William Charles Baldwin

In 1851 William Charles Baldwin loaded up his rifles and saddles, purchased 7 deerhounds, and left his native Scotland and began the 92 days ocean voyage to Durban, Africa.

He went on three hunting trips into Zululand in 1852-1856. He journeyed northwest to what is today Transvaal in 1857. In 1858 he explored Lake Ngami and was the second white man to view Victoria Falls. On this expedition he met with David Livingstone. All of these adventures are covered in his book of extreme adventure titled "African Hunting and Adventure from Natal to Zambesi", which is made up of his journals which were kept during the discomforts of his expeditions. He covers numerous close calls with death at the hands of various ferocious African beasts and other dangers inherent in the African wilds. Along the way in these hunting safaris he bags literally hundreds of game animals including multiple trophies of each species of African big game.
