- Emerson & Monty
- When the Shivers Run Down Your Spine
- When the Wind Howls in New Directions

In The Bride Price, it was almost a perfect wedding. Almost. Judith Price, noted puzzle designer, had finally found the love of her life. Daniel Danvers, quiet and reserved, had finally popped the question, and the arrangements were all but completed, when everything fell apart. Her father, Alistair Price, the noted author and literary critic had been killed, his body found slumped over his writing desk, a letter opener used to end him.

Local sheriff Alan Voorhees has set his sights on Danvers as the prime suspect. But Judith is certain that Daniel could never do such a thing, and now she is in a race with the law. Sheriff Voorhees will arrest Daniel on Monday, but Judith must solve the mystery of her father's death, and identify his killer in the next two days.

In Price of Freedom, a boating enthusiast is dead, an apparent victim of poisoning. But is it a case of accidental ingestion, or did someone set out to put an end to the town's preeminent sloop racer? The town's regatta is only days away. Can Judith bring her skills to bear, and the criminal to justice? There isn't much time.

In Emerson & Monty, Emerson Smith has always fancied herself something of a sleuth, but when the chance for some real sleuthing arises, her skills are put to the test! An aspiring author and full-time dog-sitter, Emerson is the kind of neighbor everyone wishes they had. She always picks up after her dogs and she never fails to welcome neighborhood newcomers with a freshly baked pie. Recently, however, Emerson has noticed that one of her elderly neighbors, the owner of an ornery English bulldog named Carmine, has gone missing.

When a new face shows up in the old man's home, Emerson is determined to get to the bottom of things. The question is, is Emerson as much of a sleuth as she aspires to be or has she seen the last of the old man and the cantankerous Carmine?

In When the Shivers Run Down Your Spine, Kate Plain is just that- plain. She blends into her surroundings and observes. Painfully shy and unaware of any of her potential charms, she just goes to work every day, does her time there, quietly and efficiently and then comes home. At night she puts on fuzzy pajamas, gets a warm cup of coco and then writes lurid stories that are published under an alias. Even the picture on the cover of these books are not of her- they are pictures of her sister Elyse.

In When the Wind Howls in New Directions, Susan Cabot opens her eyes in the hospital. She has practically no memory of what happened to her and Colton Pidcock in that hotel room, where they must have been attacked by her best friend Kate. But Susan still can't believe it, though she struggles to remember the tragedy, she can't get out of her head one particular detail. The scent. The scent that seems surprisingly familiar.
