You take the high road; a guide to the place names of colonial Eastern Shore of Maryland, Clay Louise Morris

From the Foreword: "Driven by curiosity, we have drawn comparisons of some old maps with the new, of people in general and places in particular. This is not a study in personalities nor prominent old families, because their names left little early imprint on the topography and nomenclature of the area, though they did influence the laws, social life and in general the mores of the times. The maps did not show manors as 'Bonfield,' 'Bohemia' or 'Bokertentorn' but Burling's Tavern and Goldsborough's Mill were landmarks to note.... For instance, there's Birds Nest, Pot Pie, Rising Sun, Wide-Awake, White-Eye Plains, Tranquility and Tribulation, Shoo-fly, Life and Defeated, Eulogy and Enigma, Birthright and Barndoor and do you know what a Tump is?"
